AI Lab Program FAQ

Q: What is the AI Lab?

A: AI Lab is a 12-week program starting June 29th. Live classes run Monday through Thursday evenings over Zoom, with occasional in-person weekend workshops in LA. It's structured like a workplace: you report to a manager, work on teams, deliver real projects sourced from employers who are actively hiring, present to leadership, and receive performance reviews.

Q: Is the program really free? Are there stipends?

A: Yes. At FCF, training, career coaching, and a certificate from Columbia University are completely free. Comparable Ivy League programs cost $25,000 or more, which means we can't provide stipends.

Q: Who is this for?

A: Our programs are for system-impacted people from under-resourced communities ready to build professional careers, with a focus on young adults ages 18-30. You need to be digitally capable, motivated, able to commit 40 hours per week, and have at least two years of work experience or college.

Q: What skills will I build?

A: Durable professional skills like problem solving, communication, collaboration, and self-direction that ensure you can adapt as the job market changes. And applied AI skills like using AI to automate workflows, analyze information, and solve real business problems. The durable skills keep you employed long-term. The AI skills get you in the door.

Q: What do I graduate with?

A: A certificate from Columbia University, a portfolio of four projects built from real employer problems, a career-ready resume, cover letter, and LinkedIn profile. 94% of our graduates are employed at companies and nonprofits including Amazon, Capital One, Oracle, and Etsy.

Q: What career support is provided?

Career coaching and mentorship from day one. After the program, lifetime access to coaching to help you get hired and promoted, along with our alumni networks and professional community.
